

California Transparency in Supply Chains Act of 2010

On January 1, 2012, under the California Transparency in Supply Chains Act (SB 657), retailers and manufacturers doing business in California with over $100 Million in worldwide gross receipts are required to publicly disclose their efforts to eradicate slavery and human trafficking from their supply chains.

Actavis is committed to being a leader—for patients, customers, fellow employees and shareholders—in the worldwide pursuit of trusted generic and specialty branded pharmaceuticals and biologics. Through our passion and commitment, we seek to leverage our technologies in drug development and delivery, as well as our operational expertise to help others achieve a better quality of life. As such, Actavis is committed to ensuring that quality and safety standards are maintained throughout our supply chain. This includes our suppliers' compliance with applicable labor laws and statutes.

Third-party Verification of Supply Chains: Actavis does not currently utilize a third party to evaluate its global supply to determine the risk of trafficking and forced labor. Rather, Actavis' in-house personnel conduct this assessment in conjunction with the Company's Legal, Security, Internal Audit, and Global Ethics & Compliance Functions.

Supplier Audits: Actavis conducts risk-based periodic audits of its suppliers, using both in-house and third party auditors. Risk levels are assigned based upon our knowledge of the industry and the country of origin.

Certification: Actavis does not currently require its direct suppliers to certify that all materials incorporated into its product were sourced, processed and manufactured in compliance with the human trafficking and slavery laws of the country or countries in which they operate. However, Actavis' supplier agreements require the supplier to comply with applicable laws and regulations.

Standards: Actavis has not established specific company standards on human trafficking and slavery. However, Actavis' Code of Conduct and other related policies require employees, as well as those entities and individuals with whom Actavis does business to comply with the applicable laws and regulations governing the company's global business activities.

Non-Compliance: If Actavis has reason to believe that a supplier is not in compliance with our agreement, policies, or applicable laws and regulations the Company will provide the supplier the opportunity to remedy the non-compliance and provide Actavis sufficient evidence to demonstrate the corrective action. If the supplier does not remedy the non-compliance, or if the corrective action cannot be verified by Actavis, the Company will seek to eliminate the supplier from its supply chain.

Training: Actavis's procurement personnel are trained to identify and respond to supply chain risks such as child or forced labor as part of the procurement process.

Additionally, all Actavis employees are required to acknowledge and adhere to the Company's Code of Conduct. Violations of the Actavis Code of Conduct may result in disciplinary action up to, and including, termination of employment.
